

Where in the world are your E-DISCOVERY NEEDS?

In a global business environment, your company faces global investigation, regulatory enforcement and litigation risk.

REGULATORS WORLDWIDE ARE FOCUSING ON CORRUPTION RISK:

Your records are already stored in various locations across the world...
Are your cross-border e-discovery processes keeping pace?

Cross-border M&A activity $1.3 totaled = TRILLION in 2014
a 78% INCREASE over 2013*

The E-Discovery Quick Guide

for Multi-national, Multi-jurisdictional and Multi-lingual Investigations

Protect & Manage Your Data

Build a sound infrastructure with proper policies, procedures and internal controls to ensure that information all over the world is properly managed and stored before an investigation or regulatory enforcement occurs.

67%

of corporate counsel rank "data privacy and security laws" as the greatest cross-border e-discovery challenge.

Get Smart About International Regulations

Be aware of complex local data privacy and security requirements that impact how you preserve, collect and transfer digital information.

Secure Local Expertise

Local, multi-lingual resources who understand cultural and linguistic nuances, as well as how local cultures use different technologies for corporate communications, can help better navigate on-the-ground data collection and yield a more efficient review.

Chinese consumers spend 4 hrs/week instant messaging and just 20 min/week on email, compared to U.S. consumers who spend only 2.6 hrs/week instant messaging and 5.5 hrs/week on email.

Cost of working together?
Priceless.

Collaborate & Cooperate

Develop a global team of experts who have experience working together and have relationships with international agencies like the European Commission and International Trade Commission to ensure e-discovery is consistent with expectations, decreasing costs and increasing effectiveness.
